

Cabin reservations

for the White Mountains National Recreation Area

Reservations for public use cabins in the White Mountains National Recreation Area are now handled through the federal government's online reservation and payment website Recreation.gov. The BLM is excited to offer this new service. The Recreation.gov website includes many features that the public has often requested we provide:

- calendar showing availability of each cabin
- ability to make reservations by phone or Internet
- secure billing process
- information and photos for each cabin
- method of obtaining a refund

Although cabin rental fees remain $25 per night, Recreation.gov charges a service fee of $9 for online reservations (or $10 for phone reservations), so the total cost per night for cabin reservations will increase slightly—but remain well below the cost of many public use cabins in Alaska.

We will no longer take reservations through our Fairbanks office. However, our staff is still available in our Public Room and by telephone (see contact information below) to provide information on White Mountains cabins and trails and to help you make reservations using Recreation.gov. Additional help is available from Recreation.gov's toll-free number (1-877-444-6777).

Not Everything Has Changed

Please note that the following BLM reservation rules and policies have not changed with the switch to Recreation.gov:

- maximum three-night stay at each cabin
- reservations can be made to 30 days in advance
- reservations are from noon to noon

In response to public feedback, the BLM is considering additional changes to our White Mountains rules and policies, but most of those changes will require a formal rule-making process, including additional opportunities for public input. Stay tuned!
